

1. I was never the best student in math class. There were some times when I even hated the class. But numbers and problem solving gave me a great sense of accomplishment. It's an enlightening feeling, if that's the right word for it: to solve a problem that no one else can, AWESOME. Numbers attract me; they're intriguing. (Plus, I've always adored the office environment.) So, I realized accounting was just something I wanted to do.
2. Definitely not, I never even know accounting existed until I reached junior high. I was always a dreamer, I had my head in the clouds most of the time, but once my teacher would hit the board with his chalk or marker, my face was glued to the front.
3. If I could go back in time, I would definitely remain an accountant.
4. I don't think I had any influences. I mean, my mother was a stay-at-home mom and my father was a manager of some small computer company -which I still don't know the name of.
5. When I wake up in the morning, I'm tired as hell, to be honest. I don't particularly hate or absolutely adore my job or something. My job is my job and I'm satisfied with where I'm at with it.
6. High School was probably the same for me as it is for you, now. Well, actually, now that I think about it, I came over to America when I was around 15 or 16 years old, Sophomore year, right? It was pretty difficult for me, to be honest. I couldn't speak a single word of English and most of my school work was in English, except for math. Numbers is the same in every language, which is also something that I love about numbers.
7. Most definitely! But I try to really hard to move on. I mean I'd rather spend my time being satisfied with what I have then regretting a past and unchangeable decision.
8. I feel the exact same way I did in college about accounting. Most people say happiness is key but I feel that numbers is key... to a combination lock. (God that was cheesy, sorry).
9. Well, if you mean decisions out of work, then yes. Accounting hasn't really changed my routine in life or something, but it has gotten me more paranoid with my money which helps me a lot in saving money. I check my receipts all the time, now, and I check my taxes and other bills very easily, since I do it all day at work, sometimes.
10. Numeric.

Questions:

1. What made you want to major in accounting?
2. Did you always want to be an accountant as a child?

3. If you could go back in time would you change your major?
4. Did you have any influences in making the decision to become an accountant?
5. What do you think when you wake up to get ready to go to work?
6. How was your high school life?
7. Do you have any regrets in life?
8. Do you still feel the same way about accounting?
9. Has accounting influenced your decision?
10. Describe accounting in one word.