

1. where did you go to high school? What did you like about it? what didnt you like? How did you feel about going to high school on the east side.
2. where do you go to school now? pros and cons?
3. what are you studying? what interests you about it?
4. What type of career are you looking for?
5. Where are you looking to transfer? why?
6. interested in living away from home? why or why not?
7. what about east side san jose has affected your decisions about your education and your future?
8. what will you miss about the east side? one thing you will always remember about your time in sj?
9. What wont you miss about the east side? any stories?
10. anything else you'd like to add?

1. Independence High. I like that it was a very big high school and it wasn't a "cliche" high school where you could pinpoint out stereotypical popular or nerdy kids. It was also BIG so you always met new people each year. I didn't like how it didn't have lockers. As a freshmen I was scared about going to high school in the east side because I thought of it as ghetto. But once I graduated I took pride in the east side. It's now home

2. De Anza. -: commuting, tough to get into classes, high school part 2. +: quarter system
3. Film & Kinesiology. Film is my passion. I loved storytelling and putting on a show. The mechanics of the body also interest me and I've always been good with biology
4. Cinematographer/Director or undecided Personal trainer/Physical Therapist
5. SFSU. Local, good Film & Kinesiology programs and environment
6. YES because I was to experience a new city/environment but local so I can be close to my family
7. Strive to do your best because the east side has taught me to not just try to outshine your peers but you have the potential to outshine the person you think you are capable of being
8. It's basically home. I have bonds with even the neighborhoods, stores, plazas and people and the diversity of it
9. It's not that i won't miss anything because I cannot escape from my past but I would just like some time away from it so I can experience new thing be ABLE to MISS the east side. Time away from home is healthy for an individual
10. Have no regrets with your high school career!